Trustee's Sale.

Whereas, Joseph A. Rich and Sarah A. Rich, his wife, by their certain deed of trust, dated the 5th day of August, 1896, duly recorded in the office of the Recorder of Deeds for the County of Iron and State of Missouri, in book 36, at page 533, did convey to R. A. Rich, trustee, the following described real estate, situate, lying and being in the County of Iron, and State of Missouri, to wit: The southwest quarter of the southeast quarter and the east half of southeast quarter southwest quarter—all in section twenty-seven, township number thirty-four, north, of range two east.

Which said conveyance was made in trust to secure the payment of a certain promissory note in said deed described; and whereas default having been made in the payment of said note;

And, whereas, it is provided in said deed of trust that, in case the trustee therein named shall become incapacitated to act or refuse to act as such trustee, the then acting sheriff of Iron county, Mo., shall act as such trustee; And, whereas, the trustee herein named has, since said deed of trust was executed, become the legal owner and holder of said note, and therefore cannot act as such trustee;

Now, therefore, at the request of the legal holder of said note, and in pursuance of the terms of said deed of trust, I, the undersigned sheriff and trustee, will on Monday, the 2d day of July, 1899, between the hours of nine o'clock A. M. and five o'clock P. M. of that day, at the court house door in the City of Ironton, Iron County, Missouri, proceed to sell at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, the real estate above described, to satisfy said notes, interest and expenses of this proceeding.

Ironton Mo., May 22, 1899.

Anglo-Saxon Slavery.

In our next issue we will begin the publication of a series of articles revealing the treachery of Cleveland's second administration, in securing the final demonetization of silver and the issuance of more than $260,000,000 of interest-bearing bonds in time of peace. The articles will be written by an attorney who stands near the head of the Western bar, a gentleman of erudition and wealth, and a man of large influence, socially and politically. Those who know him accept his unsupported word as absolute truth. He is conservative by nature and training, and constitutionally opposed to everything having the least resemblance to sensation. This gentleman will relate only what he heard and saw, or received from others under conditions that would admit the information as evidence in any reputable law court.

The avowed object of the conspirators was the establishment of an Anglo-Saxon white slavery in America, by means of the demonetization of silver, the crushing weight of hopeless debt, and the concentrating power of interest. During a business trip to New York in 1892, the author of the articles unintentionally overheard a conference of the conspirators, which was addressed by a prominent Eastern attorney who is still living, and who was subsequently appointed by Cleveland to fill a vacancy in the Supreme Court, but the Senate refused to ratify the appointment. This circumstance is well-known and will be remembered by many of our readers. This was before Cleveland's second election. The Speaker outlined the policy to be pursued, which was to enforce the repeal of the Sherman Purchase law, and thereby finally dispose of silver and lead up to the placing of bonds to such an extent that they would create a permanent national debt, such as they have in England. He stated that this could be done by the Republican party, and that, in anticipation of the movement, the Harrison administration had already prepared the plates for printing the bonds—a fact now well known to all the people. But he claimed that it would be better for this work to be done by a presumably Democratic administration, as it would divide, discredit and probably destroy any party that became responsible for it; and as the Democracy was the party of the people, the intended victims of the conspiracy, the dirty work ought to be done by an administration for which that party would stand responsible. We will not repeat all that was said and done at this conference of the conspirators, as that will be given in full by the author of the articles; but every Democrat will remember how well the programme was carried out. It was held that the simultaneous treachery of two such men as Cleveland and Carlisle would so amaze and bewilder the masses of the party as to lead to their easy and perhaps permanent defeat. Cleveland had been sounded, and they knew that he could be depended upon; and it was also known that Carlisle could be controlled through his family relations. Carlisle was then next in line for the Presidency, after Cleveland, so that the contemplated treason was indeed an event calculated to astound and paralyze the people. Under these conditions the fat ex-President was re-elected, on a platform demanding tariff reform; but he was hardly seated in the chair when he called an extra session of Congress to repeal the silver law, and by collusion with the bank and bond conspirators precipitated the panic of 1893 and forced the sale of bonds, as had been planned a year before. Then followed the disastrous campaign of 1894, and the disruption and defeat of the Democratic party in 1896. Utter ruin would have come to the Democracy that year, and been succeeded by the hopeless bondage of debt for the people, except for the timely appearance of the gallant young Nebraskan, who sounded the note of alarm and led the most wonderful political fight ever made in the history of a nation.

As a result of Cleveland's treachery he retired from the Presidency worth more than $7,000,000 which he accumulated by means of "opportunities" thrown in his way by the conspirators, according to agreement. Secretary Carlisle was corrupted through his family relations, as had been prearranged, and more than $2,000,000 in cash were paid as the price of his treachery. Another incident of the conspiracy was the shameful contract made in 1895 by Secretary Carlisle with the agents of the Rothschilds, which was given in full in our issue of May 11, by Mr. Bronson C. Keeler. All of these matters will be clearly set forth in the series of articles referred to.

And we repeat, that the avowed purpose of the conspirators was the establishment in America of an Anglo-Saxon white slavery and the adoption of a form of government similar to the English Imperial system. Astounding as these claims are, the contemplated series of articles will prove their candid truth, and if the Monocrats are not defeated in 1900 they will yet accomplish their purpose. The trust movement, the conquest of foreign nations, and the permanent establishment of a large army, are all part and parcel of the main central object. —Mississippi Valley Democrat.

Protect Our Food.

The doctors inform us that alum is a poison, and that alum baking powders should be avoided because they make the food unwholesome. Prominent hygienists, who have given the matter most study, regard these powders as an evil that should be suppressed by state action. In Minnesota and Wisconsin alum powders are not permitted to be sold unless they are branded to warn consumers of their true character, while in the District of Columbia the authorities have under the direction of Congress, adopted regulations to prohibit the use of alum in bread altogether.

Are not the people of other states, as well as those of Minnesota and Wisconsin, entitled to warning of a danger which is apparently menacing them at close hand, and is not the whole country entitled to absolute protection, by legislation which is entirely prohibitive?

Until we can have protection in the form of a statute, how can our state boards of health, state analysts or food commissions better serve the public than by publishing in the newspapers from time to time the names of the baking powders which they find to be made from alum?

Meantime, it will aid the housewife in designating the alum powders to remember that all powders sold at twenty-five cents or less per pound are of this dangerous class. Pure cream of tartar powders are usually sold at from forty-five to fifty cents a pound.

A Live Issue.

The meeting of the Ohio Valley Bimetallic League, at Louisville, Ky., last week, attended by over two thousand delegates, and exceeding in enthusiasm any meeting of bimetallicists ever before held in the United States, should set at rest any doubts, if doubts there were, in the breasts of timid men in regard to the vitality of the silver question as an issue in our politics. It demonstrates beyond question that the work of education on the money question has made great strides since the campaign of 1896, and that the bimetallicists at least understand the forces that are responsible for the formation of the modern gigantic international combinations called trusts.

When the masterful discussion of the economic disturbances of our time and their cause that was presented by the distinguished speakers who addressed the meetings at Louisville are contrasted with the shallow, sickly, limping arguments made against trusts in the gold press, the contrast is calculated to soften our hearts and cause pity to dwell therein.

All bimetallicists have cause to rejoice over the grand demonstration at Louisville. Three things were demonstrated beyond question at the Louisville meeting. The first is that bimetallicism is stronger with the American people to-day than ever before, and the second is that the Chicago platform has gained steadily in the affections of the people, and the third was that Bryan is the only candidate in the minds of the people for 1900, his presence creating as much enthusiasm as if already nominated.

Those who are informed upon the money question understand the exceptional conditions which have operated during the past two years to make conditions under the gold standard tolerable, and realize that they are not likely to occur again soon. They also realize that the determination of the banks to form a paper money trust, usurp the functions of the government and acquire the power to plunder the people at will, has not abated an iota. They understand that the multiplication of trusts has simplified and augmented the power of the banks to compel capital represented by these combinations to do their bidding. In fact, the men who attended the Louisville meeting are the men of all men who are equipped to lead the fight against monopoly and special privilege because they understand the cause and the cure for the giant evils that are so rapidly culminating in obedience to inexorable law. The test of science is to correctly forecast events in accordance with laws deduced from experience. The bimetallicists are familiar with the phenomena that has invariably repeated itself under certain economic conditions. They predicted two years ago what has since taken place are and now able to forecast the future more correctly than before. The trusts and combines that are being formed are not surprises to them. And should the people now fail to arouse themselves and throw off the deadly incubus that is settling itself upon the country the bimetallicists will not be taken by surprise when the monster militarism shakes its gory locks across the path of freedom to the ballot box at no distant day.

We rejoice in the decision of the Ohio Valley Bimetallic League to extend its organization into all the states and prepare for active service in the caucuses and conventions of next year. The National Watchman congratulates the officers of the league upon their success in the past and their prospects for the future and tenders the use of its columns to aid them in their work. —National Watchman.

Queer Democratic Doctrine.

The Philadelphia Times, which vainly imagines itself to be a Democratic paper, says:

"And now while everything is coming the American way why should there be any further delay about getting rid of the endless chain paper currency and permitting the Treasury to go out of the paper currency business entirely? While our money is on the gold basis for all practical purposes, the retirement of the greenback currency and the substitution of a sound bank currency would put an end to all future peril from this source."

With the government in honest hands, as it will be after Mr. Bryan's inauguration in 1901, there will be no more danger from the "endless chain" on account of greenbacks than there would be from a "sound bank currency." Bryan will make all money authorized by the Government—"sound" money and "good" money, interchangeable at par at the convenience of the Government. That is to say, if a smooth individual should go to the Treasury with a roll of greenbacks for the purpose of drawing out gold and starting an endless chain, he would be politely informed that the treasury was a little short of gold that day and they would pay part of the amount in gold and part in silver, as they do in France. That would stop the endless chain on the instant. The greenbacks received from the smooth individual would be immediately paid out again in exchange for services rendered or other obligations of the Government, and thus we would have a perfect interchangeable or swappable currency as good as gold and constantly in circulation. No party can face the voters of this country on any sort of a proposition to substitute bank shipmasters for Government bills, and no man or paper that knows anything about Democracy would suggest such an infamous measure. —Mississippi Valley Democrat and Journal of Agriculture.
